The Middlesex County Improve-ment Authority (MCIA) recently received a 2005 Outstanding Achievement in Recycling Award from the N.J. Department of Environmental Protection. The MCIA was honored for its education outreach programs. The authority uses “MC Blue,” a recycling education robot, to inform the public about recycling. It also distributes its “Reuse It” directory, which encourages residents to donate unwanted goods to organizations within Middlesex County for reuse.

The New Jersey State Bar Foundation will present a seminar on buying and selling a home Dec. 7 from 7-9 p.m. at the New Jersey Law Center, 1 Constitution Square, New Brunswick. Yvette R. Murry, acting director of the citizenship and service education (CASE) program at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, was recently named “Experiential Education Rising Leader of the Year” by the National Society for Experiential Education (NSEE). A resident of North Brunswick, Murry was also elected to the NSEE board of directors. She has served as CASE’s acting director since 2004. Prior to that, she was a counselor, educator and trainer for several community based organizations. She works closely with faculty, administrators and community-based organizations to enhance opportunities for students to engage in community-based learning. She has also taught courses and authored publications focusing on public policy issues related to HIV. Murry is a board member of the Volunteer Center of Central New Jersey and sits on the advisory boards of several nonprofits. She received a B.A. in English, and a master of social work degree at Rutgers.

During CASE’s 15 years at Rutgers, students have worked with more than 650 community partners. The nonprofit NSEE consists of educators, businesses and community leaders. Founded in 1971, it serves as a national resource center for the development and improvement of experiential education programs nationwide.
